Venue	Seminar Hall (Room No: 405) Breaking Free from Plastic: A Path to a Greener Planet is a powerful and timely call to action aimed at addressing one of the most pressing environmental crises of our time: plastic pollution. This initiative, movement, or publication (depending on context) centers on reducing global dependence on single-use plastics and transitioning toward more sustainable, circular systems that protect ecosystems, human health, and the climate. At its core, Breaking Free from Plastic highlights the deep-rooted impacts of plastic—from the extraction of fossil fuels used in production, to the accumulation of waste in oceans and communities, to the toxic effects on wildlife and people. It urges collective responsibility, advocating for systemic change through policy reform, corporate accountability, and grassroots activism.
